ANNUAL THANKSGIVING GAME OF TWO SCHOOLS

P. C. S. and P. H. S. Will Meet on Gridiron at Palmetto Beach.

To Settle Question of Superiority of Two Strong Elevens.

The football teams of the Pensacola Classical School and the Pensacola High School will meet in their annual game Thanksgiving Day. This will be the banner event of the local season and promises to surpass all similar events ever held on a local gridiron. Never before have two local teams faced each other between which such keen rivalry has existed and never has such spirited enthusiasm been displayed by the contesting institutions. Every student from the most diminutive prep to the biggest senior is talking about the approaching game, and every friend of the schools and lover of sports is showing an interest that the schools have never before known. It is conceded that the game will be a battle royal from start to finish and the prettiest exhibition of football ever played by two local amateur teams. Neither team will have any appreciable advantage and both are confident of victory. They will average about 128, both have had long weeks of practice and have played two games. The players are in the pink of condition and are eager for the fray. As the specified day draws near the Classical School team finds itself in better shape than it has yet been this season, though possibly not as good a team, as a whole, as the material at hand and the untiring work of their coach, Prof. Ormond, would lead those who watched the game against the University Military School to expect. Several members of the squad have been irregular at practice recently and this may tell sadly against them if it is found necessary to use these men in the Thanksgiving game. Physically the men are, of course, in better shape than at the beginning of the season and will be able to stand a hard game. One point of strength the team now has, which it did not have in the game against the Mobile U. M. S. Brawler, who was out for that game, will very probably resume his position at tackle. It was Brawler who will be remembered, who saved the Classical School from being given a "goose egg" in the game played in Mobile against M. M. I. and who distinguished himself generally, though especially on the defensive. The Classics feel more secure in regard to their backs than they have yet felt this season. Heretofore, Turtle, while playing always a steady game, seemed to be lacking in the effectiveness which one would expect from his general qualities as an all-around gridiron man. In the game of last Saturday, however, he was shown up in what was to be expected in him. He is a low charger and a sure tackler. The other backs, Hannah, Brent and Avery seem, in the opinion of their coach, to be in good form and if they show up on Thanksgiving in this same form, the P. C. S. will not meet defeat through any fault of theirs. A few days more of hard work on the part of the line men and with the encouragement given by the return of Brawler, the Classics' battering ram will be ably capable of protecting their backs while they are getting their moves under way. The Classics seem quite conservative in their plays and appear to depend on no great variety; in their signal practice they are showing good form when putting their plays in execution. They expect to win; and reasoning, according to the showing made by the respective teams in previous games, justifies their expectations. They are not over-confident, however, and are hard at work every day. The High School Team. In regard to the High School team, it is hard to say anything about the work they are now doing; it is considerable. Since the M. M. I. game, in which they met such overwhelming defeat, the team have not gotten back to its old zealous practice and are at present badly out of form. The trouble doesn't appear in that they are discouraged. The boys individually are listless and seem to think that because in previous years the High School has defeated its more determined rival, they merely in being representatives of the High School, will, unquestionably win; over-confidence. They hardly seem to realize that the name of the school will not win the game for them, and that there is only one thing that will, work. As to previous years, the High School not only had more and better material, as is realized by their captain and coach, but these teams before them worked, and worked hard. The line-up of the High school has not yet been given out. The Classics will probably be assembled as follows: Friedman, left end; Williams, left tackle; Barton, left guard; Eagan, center; Phillips, right guard; Brawler, right tackle; Sublette, right end; Hannah, quarter back; Turtle, right half; Brent, (Capt.) left half. Substitutes: Pace, Wilson, Abercrombie, Sweeney, O. Brawler. Taking all in all the game will be no pink tea affair, but the liveliest and prettiest exhibitions of football of the season. The new rules have made the game much more spectacular and exciting and if possible far more interesting. There will probably be a band on hand to add to the entertainment and as Thanksgiving is a holiday an immense crowd is expected to turn out and encourage the teams. Both schools are burning with enthusiasm and there will be rooters decked out in colors and with noise instruments galore to cheer their teams to victory. This will be the banner event of local school athletics and its success is assured. After the "big game" of Thanksgiving day the Classical School will have other games. They play Barton Academy in Pensacola and a second game against the University Military School in Mobile. With these games the season ends for the men who wear the scarlet and purple. They hope to finish the season with four out of five games to their credit and are working each and every man in a way that gives them justified expectation in believing their hopes will become realizations. If, in the Thanksgiving game they succeed in placing the scarlet and purple over the High School tigers they will have accomplished one thing that they have worked for and will have climbed one step higher toward their goal for the season's ending. The High School has one more game scheduled for this year, that against M. M. I. in Mobile. Unless others are
